

Printed from

THE TIMES OF INDIA

'Use education to make world a better place'

TNN | Nov 11, 2017, 05.44 AM IST

NAGPUR: One should use the knowledge gained through education to serve the society and make the world a better place. Such events help students in their careers as well as provide an enriching experience," said Sumathi Venugopalan, principal of Centre Point School, Wardhaman Nagar.

She was speaking at the inauguration of the school's maiden Model United Nation 'CENMUN 2017: One World One Nation', organized in association with The Times of India, on the school premises on Friday.

Sunil Manohar, former advocate general of Maharashtra, was the chief guest. Animesh Mishra, commissioner, regional providential fund was the guest of honour. Founder director Arun Upadhayaya director Jay Singh Rajwade, and executive director Mukta Chatterjee were also present.

The students as well as teachers of the school were filled with excitement. A beautiful dance on the theme of unity in diversity was also organized on the occasion. The performance showcased different dance cultures from across the world. The school choir also sang a song signifying the strength of brotherhood.

Speaking on the occasion, Mishra, said, "Students must participate in such events as they expose them to the real world and provide them with first-hand experience of organizing an events." Students also learn that school is much more than textbook, he added.

"With the advancement in science and technology, globalization is today's reality. The event will offer new opportunities to the participants," Mishra said.

Underlining the importance of co-curricular activities, Upadhyaya said that the experience gained by students through such knowledge-based events would help them serve the society later.

Manohar highlighted the importance of teachers in students' life and said the former was a second parent. "Teachers transform words into wisdom. Therefore, one must learn as much as possible from teachers. Today's youth is mature, passionate and talented. The future of the country is in great hands."